

On the question of eliminating the morse code requirement for use of amateur frequencies below 30 MHz, I believe that keeping the morse code for Extra class is the way to go. Extra class is the pinnacle of amateur radio and as such one should be required to be familiar with ALL modes of communication. The Technician level should not be changed. The General class can have the morde code requirement eliminated but the written test should include more questions on electronics, propagation and proper operating procedures.
